Moments Matter

Daily life and work on the computer don't make for "exciting" newsletter material, but everyday moments matter—even when I don't get a picture. Lately, moments have included...

- ... visiting a friend going through chemotherapy.
- ... answering questions about church from people at our Free English table.
- ... messaging friends to tell them YES, God can forgive them too.
- ... hosting friends who have not been to Lampang before, praying together for our city and people we know.
- ... telling Bible stories to a friend who wants to learn about Christianity.
- ... singing Happy Birthday to that friend's mom.
- ... praying with a friend going in for an exam to become a public prosecutor.
- ... welcoming the Girl Gang to make Valentine's Cards and making sure each one knew we were glad they came. (pic, right)
- ... sweeping up dead insects and the occasional gecko. This also matters.

Jenelle and I took the train to and from Uttaradit for a prayer day. We saw and prayed for villages we can't see from the highway.

I have been in touch with a friend here for about seven years. She recently lost her husband to illness. Please pray for her to know Jesus through this situation.

Spare Sixty Would you please take one minute to pray for this need in the Buddhist world? Unashamedly I am asking you again to pray for laborers to be sent into the harvest of the Buddhist world. *Pray that as university students prepare for short-term trips this summer, God will call them to long-term service. *Pray for people to respond to God's call through church events and missionary services. *Pray for workers to be called from every nation and sent out to every nation. *Pray for faith, provision, and trust.

Praise & Prayer PRAISE GOD FOR: our Girl Gang at the market and welcoming them to our Center on Valentine's Day; many opportunities to pray for local friends and seeing God answer those prayers; a short-term team preparing to serve in Lampang in June. PLEASE PRAY FOR: deeper conversations at the market and ways to connect with new friends during the week; open hearts and minds of friends who have questions about Jesus; spiritual breakthrough, deliverance, healings, and miracles.
